Foundation Forum and Historic Huntsville Foundation Newsletter

The Historic Huntsville Foundation is committed to building a vibrant future for Huntsville-Madison County by preserving our past. Since 1974, we have promoted the protection and preservation of Huntsville-Madison County's historically, architecturally and culturally significant structures and sites through education, advocacy and public policy.

Celebrating Harrison Brothers Hardware Icing on the Cake

Donna Castellano

Want a recipe for a perfect Saturday? Start with blue skies and a fall day tinged with a hint of coolness. Blend with equal parts music, history tours, facepainting, raffles and food trucks. Serve in generous portions on the sidewalks of downtown Huntsville, and be prepared for folks to line up for seconds.

The Historic Huntsville Foundation's Customer Appreciation Day on Saturday, October 10 was a resounding success. "We thought a great way to thank those who keep the Harrison Brothers tradition alive would be to throw a party in their honor," says Jeanne Steadman, HHF Board member and organizer of Customer Appreciation Day festivities. An irresistible combination of sunshine and family-friendly activities drew crowds to the courthouse square.

The Historic Huntsville Foundation's bold purchase of Harrison Brothers Hardware in 1984 prevented the dissolution of Alabama's oldest operating hardware store. Thirty-one years later, aided by enthusiastic volunteers, dedicated staff and loyal customers, Harrison Brothers Hardware is still going strong.

This support, Steadman continues, allows Harrison Brothers to function as a cultural touchstone appreciated by area residents and visitors from across the world. She says, "This store reminds people of the Huntsville that existed before we became a modern, space-age city. Folks love being in Harrison Brothers. The store shows that a historic building can live on, enriching the lives and memories of current generations."

There is always a reason to celebrate Harrison Brothers Hardware. Stop in the store and become part of the Harrison Brothers Hardware tradition.

MOVIES in the Park ENCORE! ENCORE!

2015 Summer Movies in the Park closes with Rave Reviews

It began with Malificent, grew with The Princess Bride, and hit new records with Despicable Me, when Gru and his minions took over Big Spring Park and ensured that HHF's Summer Movies in the Park ended with a blast.

"Folks always came early to have first-choice seating, and we decided to offer entertainment before the movie began at sundown," explains Donna Castellano, HHF Executive Director.

Food trucks, face painting, magicians, and the Heart of the Valley YMCA's Funtastic Family Hour were a great supporting cast to the head-line movie, bringing thousands to the park for the free Friday night event. Movies in the Park 2016 is in production, and we look forward to another hit year!

From the Chairman. Fred Coffey

My, my, how time flies when you are Chairman of the Historic Huntsville Foundation. It seems like yesterday we were planning the menu for our annual holiday membership reception, and before we can say "Movies in the Park" or "Twickenham National Register Resurvey" we are back, once again, at this starting point.

And that is most appropriate, because your membership, your financial support, is the starting point for all we do at the Historic Huntsville Foundation.

Your membership contribution ensured that Huntsville-Madison County's most historically and architecturally significant homes, buildings and sites were identified and documented.

Your membership contribution supported another successful year of Movies in the Park, attracting thousands of folks to our historic downtown core. And your membership contribution supports the continued operation of Harrison Brothers Hardware, the visible expression of our preservation mission at work.

In the next few weeks, you will receive the invitation to our membership reception, Carols, Cocktails and Holiday Cheer, along with membership renewal materials. We hope you will renew your commitment to the Historic Huntsville Foundation.

Please join us the evening of Wednesday, December 9 at the Weeden House on Gates Avenue. This beautiful historic house will be decked out in festive finery and the dining table laden with delectable nibbles. Have a drink of your choice and join us in a toast.

We have accomplished great things. We have much to celebrate, and a new year is just around the corner.

FESTIVELY ADORNED WITH NATURAL HOLIDAY DECORATIONS PROVIDED BY MEMBERS OF THE HUNTSVILLE GARDEN CLUB.

Built in the year of Alabama statehood, the Weeden House has been the home of many prominent Huntsville residents. The home's most beloved resident is artist and poet Maria Howard Weeden whose poems and watercolor portraits of former slaves earned international recognition.

Owned by the City of Huntsville, the Weeden House is now a house museum maintained and operated by the Twickenham Historic Preservation District. THPDA

Within the house is an impressive collection of paintings and sketches by Maria Howard Weeden, portraits by noted antebellum artist William Frye and period antiques.

Through THPDA's stewardship, school children and visitors from across the world tour the Weeden House and have an opportunity to experience life in nineteenth century Alabama.

Straight to Ale Brewery Integrates Old and New at Former Stone Middle School

Katie Stamps

Growing up in the Huntsville area, my impression of Roy L. Stone Middle School has always been “the school behind the fence,” somewhat detached from the surrounding area. When I heard it is being developed by Randy Schrimsher as Campus No. 805, a 13-acre mixed-use project, I wasn’t sure what to expect.

As I turn left at the corner of Governors Drive and Triana Boulevard, I realize quickly I should have asked Dan Perry, President and co-founder of Straight to Ale Brewery, exactly where we should meet since almost every side of the building is under some stage of construction.

I should mention that I am an architectural historian by trade and a lover of adaptive reuse. I find the creativity and revitalization that comes from designing new uses for historic structures to be fascinating. After sitting dormant since closing its doors to students in 2009, the 63-year-old former school building fairly buzzes with energy and endless possibilities. Where once stood a defunct school, now stands a haven for innovation and local entrepreneurship.

Although portions of the façade have been rebuilt inward to make room for public parking and green space, the overall outward appearance of the school remains the same. Walking through the front doors, Dan tells me there are four tenants on the first floor and all but one of the spaces has been filled. The former front office to my left will be the new location of the Lone Goose Saloon. Bubba’s Catering occupies a large portion of the west side of the building.

Empty recessed areas in the hallways show where student lockers once were, and it still very much looks like a school. These recesses will most likely have built-in benches installed. Dan says Straight to Ale, which is housed on the east side of the building, will keep their lockers in place and find new uses for them. “They’re useful and they just look cool. It seems silly to destroy stuff like that.” Right away, I can see that Dan and his partners at Straight to Ale are working diligently to incorporate as many elements of the original building as possible. They’ve taken ten bays of lockers from other parts of the school and plan to reuse old tables from the science lab.

As we walk through the dark hallways, Dan points out a room that will house a shop called Sweet Liberty BYO Homebrew Supplies which will include a taproom. Next, we walk up a short flight of stairs into the former home economics classroom. It is a large room that will have a portion of the floor removed and railing installed allowing guests to look down into the room below. This first floor room will be the barrel aging floor with walls lined with barrels and a small stage at the front. Seating for approximately 300 people will be available on the first and second floors. This is by far one of the most creatively designed rooms in the building, and I can already imagine the intimate atmosphere this space will create.

The former band room will have dual uses. One-third of the room will house Ronnie Raygun’s Arcade which will showcase classic 1980s gaming and pinball machines. The other two-thirds of the space will be home to a VIP members-only speakeasy.

The main entry for Straight to Ale Brewery will feature an inviting glass façade. A small outdoor stage and patio has been built to the left of the entrance to house a biergarten. Once the facility is completed, guests walking through the front doors will immediately see a large bar positioned between two doors that lead into the former gym. This space will be the taproom where people can watch Straight to Ale employees at work while enjoying a beer in the air conditioned room. Independent local restaurateurs will run a restaurant called Ale’s Kitchen that will serve food into the taproom. Dan is also opening a doughnut bakery called Dough’s Nuts with Dion Denton of Big Ed’s Pizza and Mackenzie Rufer. They are saving the wood flooring in the gym and using those pieces to construct all of the bars, tables and booths in the taproom and speakeasy. The large “S” in the middle of the basketball court will be repurposed as a conference table. They are also trying to find ways to incorporate the scoreboards and use them as a brewery timer.

I ask Dan about the reactions that he has received after the redevelopment of this historic school was announced. He says they heard from many former students, some of whom expressed concern at the building being dismantled. Dan says Straight to Ale is adamant about finding creative ways to repurpose the original structure. After walking through the space and hearing all of the renovation plans, I can see how diligently they are working toward that goal.

Campus No. 805 is being designed by Matheny Goldmon Architects. Dan calls their work “excellent” and says they have let him and Randy have total input on the development’s overall design. “We wanted to make our area blend in with the school, so we’re going to copy the art deco columns at the front entrance,” says Dan.

Chad Emerson, Downtown Huntsville, Inc. CEO, approached Dan with the idea of expanding Straight to Ale at Stone Middle. “We loved the place, but couldn’t take on the whole building,” Dan says. A developer was needed to buy the property and cultivate it. “From there, it’s kind of gone nuts. It’s way more than we could imagine.”

At the end of my tour, we stand on a back patio overlooking the former athletic fields where the city of Huntsville is developing a 4-acre city park. The park will have space for food trucks as well as a stage on the north side that will be a venue for larger productions with room for 2,000-2,500 people. Dan says, “The city has really embraced the project, which I think is great.” Yellowhammer Brewing is on the other side of the park in a newly constructed building with new retail space next door.

Campus No. 805’s vision is to be an adult playground with an entertainment district where people can buy beer, eat food, go to local events, and connect with the Huntsville community. “We can do so much to bring people to this area of town. This is just a start of what’s coming. People are already buying houses in the surrounding neighborhoods to relocate to this area.” Dan and his partners at Straight to Ale plan to cover the entire southeast with their quality beer and products. Their hard work and attention to detail is already apparent in the design for this new expansion.

Straight to Ale’s target opening will be in mid-March 2016. I know I will be there with my favorite local brew toasting to their success. Sláinte!

Our preservation mission begins with you.

Thank you for helping us secure a more vibrant future for Huntsville-Madison County by preserving our past.
